Bought this to help introduce my two-year old son to the idea of trick-or-treating during Halloween. He ADORES Daniel Tiger, and loves this book. Each of the neighborhood friends are preparing for Halloween by choosing what costumes they will wear in the neighborhood Halloween parade. There is no mention of trick-or-treating in this book; the focus is on everyone choosing their costumes. Daniel wants to be Tigey the Adventure Tiger, Miss Elaina wants to be a robot (my son's favorite part is when she says, "beep boop beep!"), O wants to be a traffic light, and Prince Wednesday wants to be a shiny gold rock from his rock collection. Katerina can't decide on her costume, trying to choose between a firefighter, superhero, ballerina or a mommy. So she decides to be all of them. It's cute to see the kids deciding what they want to be and creating their costumes themselves. My mom always helped us DIY our Halloween costumes growing up, and as my son grows I'll encourage him to be creative and make his own costume (I'll help) over purchasing one. Homemade costumes are so much better!

Perfect tale about Halloween dress up that closely parallels the show. My 2 1/2 year old can't get enough Daniel Tiger and this board book didn't let us down. Papers are a nice size and the flaps are very sturdy and don't tear off like I was worried they might, as we look at this one frequently. It doesn't pretend to be anything but what it is, and that's enough. Enjoy, DT fans :)

My son loves Daniel Tiger, and we wanted to prep him for Halloween so we bought this. It was OK, but I had hoped it would address the concept of Trick or Treating. Instead it just focuses on dressing up in costume (and the costumes were pretty lame -- Prince Wednesday dresses up as a gold rock -- what?!). My son likes it well enough, and that's what matters. As someone said, I don't think the flaps will last very long as they are pretty thin.

My daughter loves Daniel Tiger and watches every episode on PBS kids. This book matches perfectly with the TV episode for Halloween. She was so excited to read the book, open the flaps, and follow along. It tickled her to know that she was reading something that correlated with what she was watching. So fun.

Great book for toddlers who love Daniel Tiger! This Halloween-themed book is all about Daniel and his friends dressing up in costumes. My toddler loves the lift-the-flap feature (unfortunately a little too much as one flap is now ripped off) and we read it often. A very sweet book for any fan of Daniel.

If you've seen the Dress Up Day episode of Daniel Tiger's Neighborhood, then you'll recognize the storyline in the book. It's fun to go through with my little one, having him guess what costume is behind each flap. Cute for Halloween and year-round!

My almost 3-year-old absolutely loves Daniel Tiger, so this line of books was bound to be a hit in our house. This book is extra special because it's a lift-the-flap book (and what kid doesn't love a LTF book?) If you watch the show, it's basically the Dress Up Day episode in book form. I do find it funny that they gave the book a Halloween title, but the cartoon episode never mentions the word

Halloween.

Bought this for my 2 1/2 year old who has always liked Daniel Tiger, although her love of the show has risen to new heights with the addition of baby Margaret now. She loves this book and asks to read it all the time. It follows the Halloween episode as well and she loved seeing the episode after reading this book together.
