Dooby Dooby Moo

Synopsis

Sure, they can type, but did you know that Farmer Brown's animals can sing? This favorite story is now available as a book and CD package! Duck and his friends are at it again. But this time they're pooling their considerable resources to win a local talent show, because first prize is a trampoline! The cows want to sing. The sheep want to sing. The pigs want to...dance. Dance? And Duck? Duck just wants to win that trampoline. But first he'll have to handle Farmer Brown.

"Dooby Dooby Moo" is the kids' equivalent of a light summer read. It's loads of fun, easy to follow, poses no great moral crises, and has a touch of suspense. Doreen Cronin's casual, sometimes silly tone is complemented by a wry narrative and visual wit, some smart references to pop culture, and appealingly informal watercolors with unexpected colors (especially in the shadings). Betsy Lewin excels at both minimalist pictures (e.g., two cows grazing), as well as panoramic landscapes (an exquisite night time overview of a county fair). The plot goes something like this: Farmer Brown is suspicious (but ultimately without a clue) about the sounds coming from his barn. The animals snore with a Sinatra flair: "Dooby, dooby moo" (the cows). Fa, la, la, la, baaa (the sheep), and "Whacka, whacka quack" (the duck). While this play on "Strangers in the Night" doesn't relate directly to the story, adult readers who enjoy the allusion. When the animals aren't snoring, we discover, (although Farmer Brown doesn't know), they're practicing for the county fair talent contest! The cows and sheep sing--Here's the sheep's renditions of "Home on the Range": "Baaa, baaa, baaa, baaabaaa. Fa la baaa, fa la baaaa, baaaa baaa baaa!" Cronin perfectly mimics the sounds! The pigs...well, the pigs practice "an interpretive dance," (shades of "Fantasia") which, unfortunately, puts everyone to sleep, including their tenacious singing and dancing coach, the duck. Farmer Brown, distrusting his noisy animals, takes them with him to the county fair, exactly what they wanted! Cronin and Lewin earn the gold medal for their parody of pre-performance routines.
