I'm a Chevy girl. Three out of the four everyday driver vehicles I have owned in my life thus far, including my current Equinox, have been Chevrolet. My parents currently own two Chevrolet vehicles as well (A 2012 Malibu and a 2017 Silverado High Country). I am a Chevy girl through and through. When the "new" Camaro debuted I drooled and seriously considered making it my next car. I didn't because it's a bit impractical for someone who commutes on a 5-day a week basis and drives 1000 miles on road trips a year. Plus I'd cry if it got dinged and I park amongst college students who don't seem to care if they fling their doors into the side of your car, drag their backpacks along the side of you car SUV, or tap your truck in the parking lot. Plus, in all honesty, one of the biggest reasons I didn't get a Camaro is that I'd likely get myself into trouble with a high performance modern day muscle car like the Camaro because let's face it- I already have kind of a lead foot. So, instead I drool at the ones at the dealership when I take my Equinox in for service or give ones I run across in the wild a long, loving look (I promise I am just admiring it not casing it Camaro owners).I was not disappointed by Larry Edsall's Camaro 2016: Chevrolet's Modern Performance Car. This book is made for the Camaro enthusiast. The book details the blood, sweat, tears and engineering behind the newest Gen6 Camaro and details its ultimate production.
