Llama Llama Mad At Mama

Synopsis

Yucky music, great big feet. Ladies smelling way too sweet. Look at knees and stand in line. Llama Llama starts to whine. Does any child like to go shopping? Not Llama Llama! But Mama can't leave Llama at home, so off they go to Shop-O-Rama. Lots of aisles. Long lines. Mama is too busy to notice that Llama Llama is getting m-a-d! And before he knows it, he's having a full-out tantrum! Mama quickly calms him down, but she also realizes that they need to make shopping more fun for both of them. Parents and children are sure to recognize themselves in this fun-to-read follow-up to the popular Llama Llama Red Pajama. Watch a Video

Customer Reviews

I've read quite a few reviews on this and I'm astonished at the decision-making authority over the family that a lot of folks on here give their children to decide when the family shops. Also, if the child falls asleep in the car, then they postpone their shopping trip? Who can afford that? The nearest grocery store from me is about 20 miles away so I'll be darned if I'll turn around and go back if my kids fall asleep in the car. I just make sure I don't do this around nap-time, but sometimes they fall asleep regardless. To let the child determine the parent's shopping schedule is almost like telling them they don't have to go to school because they don't feel like it and the whole purpose of this book is to show that sometimes we have to do things we don't like, but we suck it up and do them anyway. If you don't teach your children that, then you are setting them up for failure in the "real world". I can totally relate to this story and although my sons have never thrown quite the enormous tantrum that Little Llama has done in this story, they have opened packages before checkout, thrown items out of the cart and pulled items off of the shelves despite being buckled in a cart and having my constant supervision. Let's face it, kids have short attention spans and patience for shopping, but even more so, they have all this stimuli surrounding them and yet they are denied touching, tasting and playing with it during shopping trips. Regardless, parents must still shop and children need to learn tolerance for less than ideal situations. Llama Mama makes this clear in the book that she would rather be doing something else, too, but she still has to get her shopping done.
