Color Counts: Garden

Synopsis

Half of these original designs incorporate the color-by-number concept; the rest include an un-numbered version of the illustration for sheer creative coloring license. Increasing the thrill are hidden images that reveal themselves as the designs are colored in. Each creates a frame-worthy finished product! Includes 23 perforated pages; 8 fold-out pages extend to a 10" x 15" size.

Customer Reviews

If you don't have artistic talent but love colors, this is for you. And you need patience. I don't recommend for a young child - too detailed. Detailed enough that it is a good, long project. Well designed and fun to see the design emerge. Good for anyone with a steady hand. I'm 70 and love doing these. Get good fine or ultra fine markers and enjoy. The double pages are a real challenge. The only criticism is I think the duplicate pages where you choose your own colors are a waste of paper and money. You'd have to be pretty creative to come up with the right colors in the right designs for that. I highly recommend for older people with lots of time and a steady hand. A little tedious, but that's the challenge.

I bought this, Landscapes, and Gardens in the Color Counts line for my wife as Xmas gifts. Aside from the "duplicate" pictures in there, where one is free form coloring and the other is by numbers, I really have no complaints. Even that issue is a small quibble for such a niche item. I was honestly just happy to find someone making more complex books aimed at the slightly older crowd. The pictures are complex enough to keep her entertained and therefore, I can honestly say I would suggest this to anyone who knows an older child or an adult who still enjoys to color. Hopefully these will be popular enough that Mindware continues to publish new ones.

Grandchildren love these books of different topics. They use their gel pens of many colors to make bright pictures. These pics are color by number, then another page of the same thing is next to it so you can color and use our own imagination.

I just really enjoy coloring these pix. I usually color and throw away, but will save these as a guide for when I color the un-numbered ones. Easy and fun, but with a lot of detail to keep an adult occupied. Very enjoyable coloring experience.

Long before the current adult coloring book fad came along, there were the MindWare Color Counts books. I was introduced to these by a friend who used these books to relax and also occupy her mind as she was going through a relationship breakup. These books are addictive - no matter how old you are! I have this book and also the "Carnival" version. This book contains 12 designs, but there are two of each of these designs. One copy of the design is numbered so that you can "color by number" and the other copy is not numbered so you can fill in the colors as you wish. Four of these designs are larger, 10"x17" fold-out designs. Each page is perforated so that you can tear out the design either before or after you color it. The pages are not printed on both side of the paper, so you can color with pens or markers without worrying about ruining the design on the other side of the page. Each design has a "key" printed on the side, with the numbers and colors listed so you have that info right at hand. These "Garden" designs, to me, are geared more toward adults or older kids, as the designs are things like a scarecrow in a garden, a woman gathering flowers in a basket - things that I don't necessarily associate with kids. But kids of all ages, from 8 to 100, will get a lot of hours of fun from this book.

I have always loved coloring but there are too many designs that are geared for children that I feel silly working on. There are even less of this type of book on the market when you don't want to think about where to put certain colors. This book was perfect for me when I took a 7-day cruise in December and at times had nothing to do. The pages are thick enough that ink barely bleeds through and the designs are VERY intricate and take a lot of time! The page I worked on took me around 3-4 hours (even longer for the two-page drawings) but it's very fun seeing the drawing "pop out" over time :) If you buy this make sure you have a variety of different colors though...I didn't have access to a "light orange" marker so I had to use another one or skip that color and come back to it later. I really enjoy this book and I think when I finish it I'll probably move on to another Mindware book. Would buy again!

I just got this book yesterday and already I love the pictures are very pretty. I love that there is a limited list of suggested colors. I put these markers in a makeup bag and now I can carry my fun with me. The pictures are printed on one side which allows me to use markers without ruining another picture. I did put a piece of paper behind the page I'm coloring to catch any bleed through AND not damage the pages. There are also some awesome double page designs that are made so you can remove them. They fold out not like other books that are stapled in the middle and frustrating. Overall I love this book and plan to get others in this series.

This book is so charming. We bought this for our 5 and 8 year old nieces to share and they loved it. My 15 year old saw this and pulled some pages out for herself to do, too. There's probably 20 pages, including some larger fold-outs. Some are color by # and some are just color however you want. I will be buying more of these. Such a quaint gift for kids through adult. It makes me want to snuggle up under some warm covers in my pajamas and color the winter away.
