Customer Reviews

This calendar is unbelievably bad -- who would have thought they could botch such a simple concept?! Two reasons it's not worth your money: first, the calendar portion only gives you 28 days for each month! Now, we all know that technically speaking a month is only 28 days, but I want the page labeled "my first month" to include the complete month from my baby's birthday on March 27 up to April 26. With this format, "my first month" would be March 27 to April 23... and I'd run out of day squares on the calendar before I even got to my baby's 11-month birthday! The other thing, which is not nearly as bad (but still pretty annoyng) is that the top half of each calendar page is a set of fill-in-the-blanks that is EXACTLY the same for every month -- "I've been eating _____" and "My favorite toys are _____" and "My favorite games are _____" and "My favorite songs are _____" - to name just a few. A one-month-old baby does not play with toys! Or have favorite songs! Sure, you can stretch the truth a bit... say his favorite toy is the mobile in the crib, his favorite song is one you sing to him occasionally... but you can't do that month after month. It would have been much better if that top portion of the calendar had just been a picture from "Goodnight Moon" or "The Runaway Bunny," as I assumed when I bought it. OK, so the imagery is nice - but frankly, they actually could have done a better job with that, too... it's not as sweet and cute as I would have imagined. And the stickers were a let-down, too: it says it comes with 56 stickers, but there are really only 42 (the others are blank colored circles). A much, much, MUCH better option is the Peter Rabbit baby's first year calendar - adorable and well-designed. Buy that instead!

This is my 4th child's calendar I purchased in because of the art which is nice but the contents of the calendar are quite disappointing. There are not many stickers and many of them are blank. The journal entry spaces are the same each and every month which is boring and often irrelevant (1st month What does baby like to eat?). The space for the date on each calendar day is placed in the middle leaving no place to write comments. The months are laid out by the dates such as Sept 16 - Oct 16 would be one month instead of September which is confusing. I am thoroughly disappointed with this calendar and wished I had been able to see more of it before purchasing it. I am considering throwing it out and starting over again.

I highly recommend this calendar or one like it for you and for all your pregnant friends. I never could get around to keeping one of those pre-fabricated "baby's first year" journals, but this calendar is easy, flexible, and fun to keep. Especially nice are the make-your-own stickers to supplement the many stickers they include. We added, for example, "first airplane trip," "first bike ride," and, unfortunately, "first headcold."

I regret buying this product. If I had had a chance to really look at the calendar first I would not have bought it. The biggest problem that I have with this problem is a major problem- I can not write on it with ball point pen reliably and I worry that other kids of pens would smear. I don't want to have to use a special pen for it. The other big problem is that the squares are too small. I am not a fan of the way it is dated. I am somewhat disappointed by the lack of cute graphics. I don't really mind that the questionnaire portion is the same every month because it is neat to see how things change as baby gets older. I am on tonight so that I can buy the same calendar I had when my oldest was a baby because it was much better (Baby's First Year by Russ).
